DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-12, 15-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Zmitek et al. (US Pat. 5,498,788) in view of Buckton et al. in view of Czap.

Zmitek et al. disclose a rapidly disintegrating tablet containing potassium clavulanate, amoxicillin trihydrate, magnesium stearate and microcrystalline cellulose which is prepared by homogeneously mixing the ingredients, sieving and tableting (Column 11, lines 5-31).

Buckton et al. disclose that silicified microcrystalline cellulose has advantages over convention microcrystalline cellulose in tableting in that it has superior flow properties (Abstract).

Czap disclose that hydrogenated castor oil is used as a lubricating aid in tablets similar to stearic acid or stearic acid complexed with magnesium (See Editorial).

The prior art discloses a rapidly disintegrating tablet containing potassium clavulanate, amoxicillin trihydrate, magnesium stearate and microcrystalline cellulose which is prepared by homogeneously mixing the ingredients, sieving and tableting. The difference between the prior art and the claimed invention is that the prior art does not expressly disclose the use of silicified microcrystalline cellulose or hydrogenated castor oil. However, the prior art amply suggests the same as the prior art discloses that silicified microcrystalline cellulose and hydrogenated castor oil are excipients used in tableting. As such, it would have been well within the skill of one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the prior art as above with the expectation that substitution of silicified microcrystalline cellulose would facilitate the tableting process and that hydrogenated castor oil would be a suitable substitute for magnesium stearate as a lubricating aid in the tableting process.
